THE WAR CLOUD.

Although it worried her a little to think how insistent she had been, Cora held to her determination. David must choose between his own wife and Carter Brett's wife for a business partner. It was true, as David had said, that Rose Brett knew how to design big, costly gowns—the kind through which the newly rich liked to express themselves—while Cora had neither the experience nor the ability for anything more ambitious than a homey gown or a natural and charming bit of landscape.

Cora pondered over this. Woman-like, after it was done, she wondered if she had been too severe. She did so long to help David; never to hinder him. A sense of confidence swept over her as she recalled what Carter Brett had said to her development plan of the "valley tract."

"The stockholders are crazy about it," he assured her. "The young fellows say a swimming pool and a rustic tea arbor will be worth twenty to thirty times the value of the land-rols. The girls are all for it, too. Guess they see a chance to show off some nifty bathing suits. Anyhow, it's a grand little scheme, and you're a smart child to think of it."

But what if David was right about it making trouble between Brett and his wife? Suppose Rose Brett refused to give up her plan? For she had supporters, too. Many of the languid, super-wealthy matrons agreed with her that a pretty garden where liveried flunkies brought tea or cocktails on silver trays was more desirable than a "swimming hole" where red-blooded youth disported itself in brief costumes. Well, the Bretts must work out their domestic problems just as she and David were working out theirs.

The longer Cora thought it over the more eager she felt to carry the plan to success. How splendid it would be to have a part in the actual development of a community! Why, she might help to make children robust and young folks wholesome happy by the play spot she saw so vividly in her imagination. And how amazing to discover her own talent!

Ah, no; nothing could make her renounce her right to be her husband's helpmate now that she had actually proven her ability. She would not on any account let Rose Brett trample on her, stifle her personality, and end her David's career by threats or dismissal. There was Carter Brett to reckon with. And so far as this situation was concerned, Brett was on her side. Cora felt she could count on him—it only his courage lasted. If only he stuck to his determination to act independently of his brilliant wife for once!

It was a lovely sunny day. Cora, weary of the hotel, put on her hat and started out to walk off her too-thoughtful mood. As she passed the handsome offices of the Colony Park Realty company its president emerged from the doorway.

"Why, how do?" she hailed Brett with a friendly smile. "I was just thinking about you."

"Let's take a tramp, Young Person," he answered. Cora saw with a pang that he looked moody and troubled. Instantly she knew there had been a clash between the nominal head of the company and the real head—his wife.

"I feel like getting the air," Brett went on. Rose lit into me about the Valley Tract. Isn't it the darnedest thing? That's what comes of letting her have her way for the last ten years. She just walks over me. Rose walks over everybody. She don't mean to," he hastily added, for he loved his wife. "It's just her way. She's brainy, Rose is."

Cora longed to hurry him to the conclusion. Was he going to hold his ground or was he going to be "walked over"? At that moment she heard the familiar eight-cylinder chug of Rose Brett's car coming behind them. She knew, with a tug at her heart, that her husband would be seated beside her. Neither she nor Brett turned. To her amazement, as the motor came abreast of them, passed them, Rose neither turned her head nor gave the slightest sign of greeting. David waved his hand. But that was all. Then Cora knew Carter Brett had not given in. And that there would be war.

THE FASHIONS IN BRIEF.

There are so many dainty organdie blouses in the shops that it is difficult to choose the prettiest, even if the price you wish to pay is no more than two dollars. Really, they are charming, and there seems to be more pretty blouses than ever before at a reasonable price.

One is made with fluted frills at the front, edged with a narrow banding of deep pink. The sleeves are finished in the same way and there is no other trimming.

Another model is made with wide, turnback collar and deep turnback cuffs, with an edging of Irish picot lace around collars and cuffs and along the right front, which closes over the left one with Irish crochet buttons.

The fact that most women prefer low shoes to high in summer, and that skirts remain very short, has made the fashion for fancy hosiery come to the fore again. All sorts of patterns appear in the new hosiery, but perhaps the most effective are colored clocks on white or contrast-colored stockings.

With warm weather the taffeta coat has found a definite place in women's wardrobes. It answered a need always felt in summer for a lightweight, but dignified looking coat.

CHANGE MENU FOR HOT WEATHER.

Who wants soup when the temperature soars to ninety degrees?

Yet just because soup is the b. c. of dinners, many a careful housekeeper is loath to omit it. Nowadays, however, the custom is on dog days to use grapefruit, either in place of the oysters or clams, or in place of soup. Grapefruit is not always available in summer, and an acceptable variation is to be found in chilled berries, served on their stems without sugar, strawberries on the hull, food chilled watermelon and very cold muskmelon.

Even when soup is served on very hot days, it may be served cold. Jelly, beef or tomato bouillon, or jelly, lamb or chicken broth is really delicious.

If you must have hot soup, have a clear sort. Cream soups and purees will taste all the better on cool days because they have been omitted from the menu in very warm weather.

Fish food is much less heating than red meat, and it is always a good idea to omit the roast course in favor of the fish course on extremely hot days; that is, when it is possible to get fish in its pristine freshness.

Fish should not be fried in warm weather, and, in fact, fried food of all sorts should be kept off the hot weather bill of fare.

Starchy, sweet desserts are also heating and make a housewife makes a rule to serve nothing but ices and ice creams or stewed fish during the extremely hot weather.

For breakfast and luncheon hot breads are neither acceptable nor wholesome in this sort of weather. For breakfast toast, though hot, is a good choice of breakfast. Hot cereal nowadays is not a necessity, since there is quite a variety of the sort that may be served cold and uncooked.

LASSEN PEAK IS AGAIN ERUPTING

Redding, Cal., July 12.—Lassen peak is erupting again. A great column of smoke and powdered ejecta to an estimated altitude of 10,000 feet is hovering over the mountain, according to reports received today. At its maximum height the smoke flowered out into the shape of a gigantic cauliflower.

The eruption which occurred yesterday was the first of magnitude since last October. Lassen peak erupted for the first time in a long period of years in May, 1914.

WATERWAYS BILL PASSED.

Washington, July 12.—Republican senators who fought the river and harbor bill refrained from obstructing ratification of the conference report on the measure today and it was passed as approved by the house. It is the first general river and harbor bill in four years, and now goes to the president.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS TO BE KEPT OUT OF STATE

The utmost care against possible spread of infantile paralysis to the state of Utah from the east is urged upon both the public and the health officers over the state in a bulletin issued yesterday by Dr. B. Beatty, state health commissioner.

Dr. Beatty points out that because of the incurable nature of the disorder the fight against it must, to be effective, be along preventive lines. Since the state is at present free of the malady, he points out that every precaution should be practiced to keep it so.

The bulletin follows: "The serious epidemic of poliomyelitis, infantile paralysis, in eastern states, and the fact that any community may suffer from a similar visitation, emphasizes the importance of public knowledge of the nature of the disease and methods to be employed in restricting its spread."

"The fact that it is not only very fatal, but that in case of recovery the victim is usually left permanently paralyzed in one or more limbs, and, furthermore, that there is no known successful treatment, renders it a disease particularly to be dreaded. While it cannot be cured, it can be prevented. The disease affects the spinal cord and brain and occurs chiefly in infants and young children. It is caused by a germ not yet identified, and in the epidemic form is very contagious. It is known that the infectious organism is contained in the secretions of the nose and throat, and probably those of the intestines."

"The Utah law requires the prompt report of all cases and the quarantine of the patient and family. It is especially important that the existence of the disease shall be recognized at the earliest possible moment, and, in the event of its appearance in a community, every form of illness in children should be regarded with suspicion until its nature is determined. Among the first symptoms are restlessness and irritability, fever and pain in the limbs. Within a few days paralysis occurs."

Enforce Quarantine.

"Quarantine should be rigidly enforced. All discharges from the body should be destroyed or disinfected. The nose and throat of the patient should be frequently sprayed with a disinfectant solution. This also applies to the well members of the family, as their nasal membranes may harbor the germs, and they may become carriers of the infection. The patient should be isolated for a period of not less than six weeks. Isolation of other members of the family, two weeks. After the expiration of the quarantine period, thorough disinfection should be performed. Flies are known to be carriers of the infection and this affords another reason for their extermination. Rigid precautions should be taken to exclude them from the sick room."

"The disease spreads along routes of travel, and for this reason no section of the country may consider itself safe from invasion."

"There are no known cases in Utah at present, but we should be prepared vigorously to combat the disease should it appear. The same sanitary measures apply equally to the prevention of the other communicable diseases, and all community efforts to exterminate flies and improve sanitary conditions will be amply rewarded."

BANKERS TO AID DAIRY INDUSTRY

Salt Lake, July 12.—The bankers of Salt Lake City, Ogden, Logan and Provo will meet at the Commercial club in this city at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, on the invitation of Governor William Spry, to consider the recently adopted plans for promotion of the dairy industry in the state.

Invitations to attend the meeting were mailed out individually to the various bankers yesterday from the governor's office. They set forth that the purpose is to insure a wider cooperation of the bankers of the state in the movement to promote the dairy industry.

Following is a copy of the invitations sent out:

Some few days ago I called a meeting of a number of the prominent business men of the state for the purpose of discussing plans tending toward the development of the dairy industry in this state. The response from these men was very satisfactory and the discussion which was entered into finally resulted in the appointment of a committee of twelve men and, later, the appointment of sub-committees. At a meeting yesterday the report of the committee was presented and articles of incorporation were adopted, but further discussion of the subject brought out the fact that bankers from over the state generally should participate in this organization and that the movement should have more state-wide influence. To this end the suggestion was made that I call together all of the bankers from Salt Lake City, Ogden, Logan and Provo to meet on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Salt Lake Commercial club building for the purpose of discussing more in detail the plans of this organization and completing the subscription of the capital stock.

Without a single exception the men who were present and have taken part in formulating the plans for this organization are of the opinion that it is of such vital importance that we cannot afford to let the matter drop, but that it should be carried on to a successful issue.

I believe the time is ripe for the bankers of this state to get together and to formulate plans for the encouragement of our agricultural resources. The dairy industry is an important one and I believe warrants the consideration and the encouragement which our bankers can give.

I trust that you will make every effort possible to be present, because

GOETHALS TO LEAVE GOVERNMENT SERVICE

Washington, July 12.—President Wilson today agreed to accept the resignation of Major General George W. Goethals as governor of the Panama canal zone at an early date to be fixed by the general. General Goethals called at the White House and again urged his desire to resign the governorship and retire from the active list of the army, now that his work of building the canal had been finished.

Colonel Chester Harding, now engineer of maintenance in the canal zone, probably will be appointed governor.

BALANCE OF TRADE IS TWO BILLIONS

Washington, July 12.—The country's foreign trade during the fiscal year ended last month reached a total of $6,525,000,000, exceeding by many millions all previous records, according to preliminary figures announced tonight by the commerce department. Exports were valued at $4,345,000,000 and imports at $2,180,000,000. The figures are based on complete returns for the first eleven months of the year and estimates for June.

The war munitions trade was the predominant factor in establishing the new exports record. Iron and steel exports jumped from $226,000,000 in the previous fiscal year to $618,000,000, and explosives from $41,000,000 to $473,000,000. In 1914 the explosives exports amounted to only $6,000,000.

Raw cotton exported during the fiscal year was valued at $370,000,000, compared to $376,000,000 the year previous; wheat and flour, $314,000,000, compared to $428,000,000; meats, $270,000,000, compared to $206,000,000; copper manufactures, $170,000,000, compared to $109,000,000; mineral oils, $165,000,000, compared to $134,000,000; brass and manufacturers, $125,000,000, compared to $21,000,000; automobiles and parts, $123,000,000 compared to $68,000,000; chemicals, $123,000,000, compared to $46,000,000; cotton manufactures, $112,000,000, compared to $72,000,000.

Principal imports were: Sugar, $206,000,000, compared to $174,000,000; in the fiscal year 1915; rubber and its substitutes, $159,000,000, compared to $87,000,000; hides and skins, $157,000,000 compared to $104,000,000; raw wool, $145,000,000, compared to $68,000,000; raw silk, $122,000,000, compared to $81,000,000; coffee, $117,000,000, compared to $107,000,000; and chemicals and drugs, $108,000,000 compared with $84,000,000.

COLLAPSE OF THE GERMAN FORCES

Predicted by Lord Northcliffe of England—Germans Conceal the Facts.

(By Lord Northcliffe.)

London, July 12.—The present offensive conducted by the allied French and British armies is the first real result of Great Britain's twenty-three months of war preparation. Hitherto the British operations have been handicapped by a lack of big guns and big shells. When Mr. Lloyd-George started putting life into the manufacture of munitions we were competing with Germany on very unfair terms. Today 2,000,000 men and women are making shells for our big guns and are beginning to give the world an idea of what an artillery war will be like when

Great Britain gets completely going. At the outset Mr. Lloyd-George, in contradistinction to the views of many military authorities, said: "This will be a war of big guns." His big guns now are smashing the German trenches on the Somme front.

From a newspaper point of view it is interesting to note that the German newspapers received up to date have hidden from the German public the news of the 20,000 prisoners we have taken and the colossal number of their killed and wounded. The German public, hypnotized and kept in ignorance of the facts, knows nothing of the new allied offensive.

You Americans have been saying John Bull is a slow starter, to which I would reply he is a long stayer. Britain was as completely unprepared for war in 1914 as you are in 1916. The British empire realizes that this is the beginning of a very long undertaking, but is confident that it has made a splendidly successful start. Our supply of big guns and big shells now is practically unlimited. How bad things are in Germany is conclusively proved by the fact that the German government dare not reveal the facts to the German people.

In my opinion Germany will fight until we are well advanced on German soil. Then, according to an American friend of mine now in Berlin and long a close student of their psychology, they will collapse.

ried. He moved to California in 1876, coming to this city in 1881, and had since resided here. He engaged in buying and selling hides for a number of years, and was very successful. His wife died in this city about the middle of November, 1914.
